Following the address, participants were divided into groups, each assigned to plant trees in designated areas on the campus.

A total of eight saplings, including varieties such as different types of flowers such as Jaswandi, Mogra, Rose, etc. were planted during the event.

Faculty members guided the students throughout the activity, explaining the care required for young saplings and the long-term benefits of a green campus. The event also included a brief session on tree care and maintenance, ensuring that the saplings would thrive in their new environment.
